Gerard Houckgeest - (1635)1650-52

Carel Fabritius - (1650)1650-54

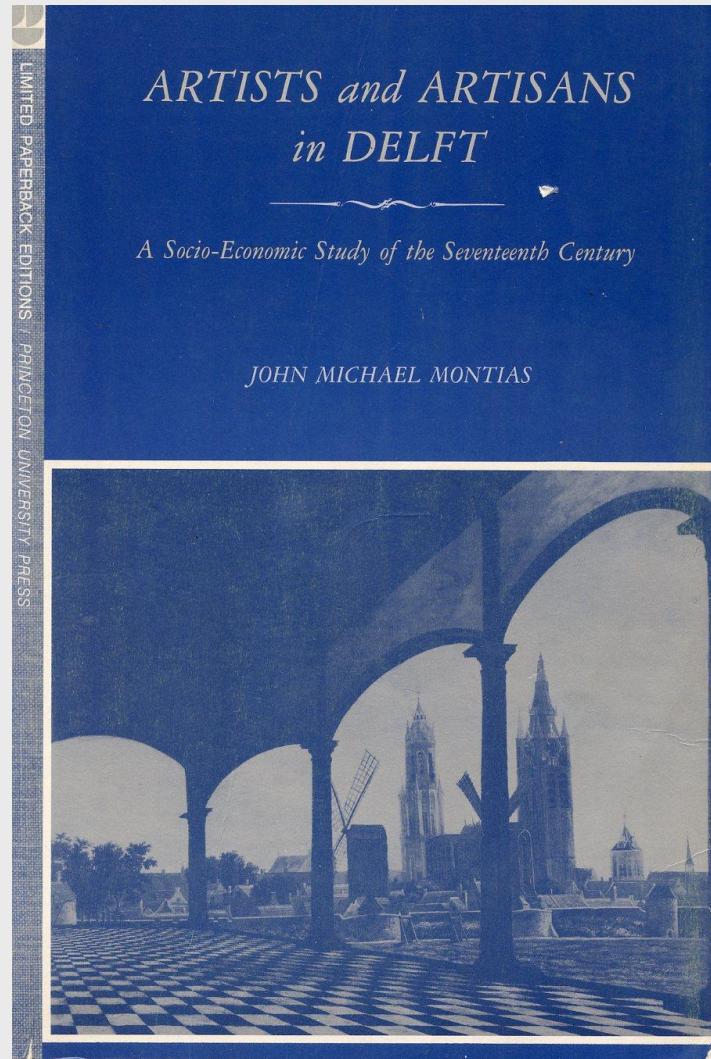

Pieter de Hooch - (1654)1657-1662

Years that Houckgeest, Fabritius, De Hooch and De Witte worked in a ‘Delft style’ while living in Delft (between brackets the year that they arrived in Delft)

No city had a leading position comparable to Antwerp in the Southern Netherlands. On the contrary. In Holland there were many cities in which first rate works of art were produced.

There were groups of painters who, working in different cities, followed the approach of one successful master, producing works of art that were interrelated.

In one city one often finds many entirely diverging types next to each other.

Styles and themes did not remain restricted to one place because the Dutch artist was not at all a stay at home. Many worked now here, then there. Often they brought new manners of painting to places where they settled.

A division in schools (Amsterdam, Delft, Leiden, The Hague etc.), as some art historians have tried to apply after the example of the Italian history of art, makes no sense, except for a few groups with a very specific stamp, like the Utrecht academicians, the circle of Hals, the Leiden fine painters, and Rembrandt and his pupils.

There are economic reasons for concentration in certain artistic centers, while certain artistic milieus or one particular artist may attract others, as was the case around Bloemaert, Hals, Rembrandt and Dou. Often this was temporary, in the first place for the purpose of training, after which the artists returned to their hometown or settled in some other place where they hoped to make a living.

Divided in three time blocks.

Every time block is subdivided in chapters on the art of different cities,
Haarlem, Amsterdam, Leiden, Delft, Utrecht and The Hague return in all three time blocks.

Middelburg, Dordrecht, Rotterdam and Leeuwarden figure in some of them.

“Every age ... has its fashions, which are introduced by one or more masters held in high esteem at the time and who are therefore capable of making an impact.”

Jan de Bisschop

“Rembrandt’s manner of painting was so universally praised, that all paintings had to be in that manner if one wanted to please the public.”

Arnold Houbraken

“a good painter pursues the kind of art that is held in esteem in the place where he works, and is often stimulated by competition in the art.”

Samuel van Hoogstraten
